The essence of the arguments floated by the paper presenters in the technical sessions To attain the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) of ending poverty and bringing in inclusive growth, activities related to agriculture need to be closely integrated with the SDG targets. With decline in the size of landholdings in agriculture, India has to focus on resource efficiency in smallholder farming to meet the SDG targets and also to attain sustainability in agriculture. A combination of resource efficient methods, dynamic cropping patterns, farming that is responsive to climate change and intensive use of ICTs should be the backbone of smallholder farming in India. For a safe and food secure future, the agriculture landscape has to undergo tremendous transformation and shift from the philosophy of 'green revolution led' productivity to 'green methods' led sustainability in agriculture.As the topic is mostly relevant to the students, nearly 200 students have participated in the seminar and upgraded their knowledge. Students committees have worked hard to conduct the seminar in a defeating manner. Apart from understanding the system of examinations, they also experienced the team work by involving themselves in various committees of the seminar. They under stood the way of presentation of papers and preparation of papers for a seminar. Some of the students also presented their papers through which they have expressed their opinions on the topic. the environment protection and agriculture development in the state demographically, economically, financially, politically, industrially, globally and technologically. The seminar will also provide significant contribution towards the sustainable agriculture development. At the end of the day the society represented by faculty members, resource persons, students, staff, administrators academicians, social activities gained the in depth knowledge on the topic. The knowledge gained through this activities will spread to the next generation also.

Finally the Department of Economics, Girraj Government College(A), Nizamabad, the students and the staff in particular and the college in general have learnt a lot from the management of the seminar. We are enriched in terms of widening the frontiers of the domains of our knowledge about Sustainable development in Agriculture , the beauty of the synergy of the knowledge, interaction with the scholars, and experts in the field of Agriculture. Creation of Environmental Concerns is the key to boost the economy of any State. It is indeed the need of the hour to focus on the in Sustainable Development in Agriculture of a newly born potential States like Telangana as it is marching towards the 'mission' of making "BANAGARU TELANGANA". And the Challenges in any sphere of economy will, in fact, enlarge the scope of operation with practical approach.
